Star Witness for the Defense in the Cooper-Sharp Trial Arrested on Perjury Charge

State Closes Rebuttal Testimony and Fate of Defendants Will be in Hands of Jury Wednesday.

Nashville, March 6.—With the examination of the two witnesses put on the stand today the state finished its testimony in the Cooper trial. On adjournment it was announced that argument will begin Monday and the case will probably be in the hands of the jury Wednesday night.

State Has Field Day.
Friday was the state's day in the Cooper trial. Not only did it tear to pieces what was left of the testimony of S. J. Binning, the defense's mysterious red-bearded man who claimed to have seen the shooting, but it challenged the right of the Coopers to be on Seventh avenue on the day of the killing. It did by impeaching the testimony of the governor and others who claimed the Coopers were invited to the mansion and that while on their way there they met Carmack and a street duel followed.

The bombardment of the case of the defense began early when two witnesses swore that Binning the night of the tragedy said to them, "If I had been there five or ten minutes earlier I would have seen the killing."

Later in the day the state introduced witnesses attacking the reason defense gave for being on the street that Senator Carmack much traversed to get to his apartments.

Col. Cooper Did Not Return.
Two witnesses swore that after Colonel Cooper left Bradford's office he neither returned voluntarily nor was recalled to the phone by anyone. And one, Miss Daisy Lee, declared that instead of the governor calling the colonel, the colonel, at Judge Bradford's suggestion, called up the governor at the capitol. The latter testimony, however, was not permitted to reach the jury.

In rebuttal, too, the state attacked Judge Bradford. Miss Lee swore that he told her he could have shot Carmack himself with as little remorse as he would have shot a rattlesnake. She also swore that Paul Davis, another defense witness, declared to her he would perjure himself to get on the jury.

By two other witnesses the state contradicted Binning as to his presence at the scene of the tragedy. These witnesses swore that they saw Carmack walking up Seventh avenue and did not see Binning. Further, they testified that they had a clear view of the street and did not see him on it all that day.

Ex-Treasurer Craig, recalled, denied he ever told D. B. Cooper that his name would not appear in the Tennessee again, or he ever told him that Carmack was in an ugly humor, directly contradicting important testimony offered by the defense in connection with the killing.

This reason was that Governor Patterson had sent for the colonel, and Robin accompanied his father, and that they were on their way to the executive mansion, which is on Seventh avenue, when they met Carmack.

Soon after court adjourned the state's attorneys went into a conference at 8 p. m. When they emerged Attorney General McCann held a warrant for the arrest of S. J. Binning on a charge of perjury. The specific allegation is that when he testified that he saw Carmack twirling the cylinder of his revolver, he swore a lie. The warrant was served at once.

In commenting on Friday's testimony the Memphis News-Scimitar says:

"But it was only a good day for Showers this afternoon and tonight with colder west portion, Sunday partly cloudy and cooler. Highest temperature yesterday, 60; lowest today, 45. Rainfall .50 inches.

THAT WEATHER MAN.

New York, March 6.—Either Willis Moore, chief of the weather bureau, "misread" signals or deliberately planned to fool the people about the inaugural weather, according to Elias Dunn, for many years local weather forecaster. "In my opinion nobody but a layman could have made such a mistake," Dunn said. He used Moore's map to show how the storm formed and that it was traveling towards Washington for two days.

the prosecution from the standpoint of the evidence actually introduced.

"It was a very bad day from the standpoint of the evidence the state strove in vain to introduce evidence showing the location of the telegraph poles to rebut the evidence of the defendants and show that from the position of the poles the defendants' version of the tragedy was impossible.

"The state tried in vain to show by a weather bureau employee that the witness Binning had falsified about the weather, and to show that the atmosphere was so dense that John Sharp could not have seen what he claimed. And E. B. Craig was not allowed to controvert the statements of the defense as to the mental attitude of Senator Carmack. All these were rigidly excluded on objections of the defense, sustained by Judge Hart. They were body blows, seriously hampering the otherwise strong case made out by the state."

County School Board

The county school board was in session this morning for the purpose of selecting a location for a county high school. It is doubtful if any decision is reached by the trustees this afternoon, as the financial standing of the county trustees is not sufficient to erect a building this year. Prof. J. A. Carnagey, superintendent of the city schools, made a speech in which he set forth the benefits of having the county graduates attend the city high school.

The trustees present were: Prof. S. J. Billington, county school superintendent, chairman; P. A. Bagwell, W. R. Davis, P. S. Straub, H. Anderson and W. F. Sexton. F. F. Gholson was the absentee.

The county board this afternoon decided to defer any action on the High school proposition.

INVESTIGATE THE CITY PEST HOUSE AT LONG RANGE

Seeing smallpox by long distance was the experience of the members of the city board of health this morning when a personal investigation was made of the city pest house, which is located several miles from the city on the Hinkleville road. As a result of the investigation it is certain that the city will have a new building before next winter, and this morning the members picked out several locations as desirable for the new wards. The present location is too flat, and water stands around the two buildings and tents that are used.

The trip was made in Mayor Smith's new touring car, but it was abandoned at the gravel road, and then the members took a half mile walk to the wards. Like a party of skulking Indians the members approached cautiously, and when within one hundred feet refused to advance another step. City Health Officer Sights and City Physician Bass ventured to the wards and treated the patients while the remaining members stood back and watched the operation through a telescope. The small child, weighing 1 1/4 pounds, was also viewed, but through the glass.

Effort to Compromise Night Rider Suits is Being Made by Att'ys at Dawson Today

Six Cases in Which Amounts Sued For Aggregate $350,000 May be Settled Without Trial.

Dawson Springs, March 6. (Special.)—A conference of attorneys and principals in the six suits for damages now pending in the federal court at Paducah filed by victims of night riders in Lyon and Caldwell counties, is being held here today for the purpose of arranging a compromise of all the cases. After conferring with his associates for some time one attorney gave it as his opinion that a final settlement will not be reached today but that the cases will all be settled before federal court meets at Paducah in April.

In the conference are Attorneys Wheeler Campbell, of Louisville, Judge James Campbell of Paducah, Carl Henderson, of Marion, and Walter Krone, of Kuttawa, representing the different plaintiffs, and Ward Headley, of Princeton, representing the various defendants which range from Felix Ewing, general manager of the Tobacco Growers' association, down to some of the most obscure farmers in Lyon, Caldwell and Trigg counties.

It is said that the plaintiffs' cases have been greatly strengthened during the past month by additional proof secured by the Lyon county officers and secret service men who have been at work on the cases, and the attorneys for the plaintiffs are holding out for a large amount of damages, as they feel confident of securing large judgments in most of the cases.

The plaintiffs in the cases and the amounts sued for are Henry Bennett, $100,000; C. W. Rucker, $50,000; A. H. Cardin, $16,400; L. M. Wood, $25,000; G. W. Gordon, $25,000; Laura Tooney, $50,000.

LIVELY

SPARRING MATCH AT LONE OAK LAST NIGHT.

Lone Oak had a lively ten rounds pulled off Friday night. A crowd of young men, composed mostly of students from Draughon's college, of the city, pulled off a ten-round sparring match at Lone Oak Friday night. The match was for ten rounds and the participants were Warren Hampton, of the city, and Jasper Peal, of Bandana, and their weight was given at 135 pounds. Both boys mixed it up lively during the contest, but at the beginning of the tenth and last round Peal appeared groggy and threw up the sponge and the referee, William Zeiss, awarded the decision to Hampton.

Quite a crowd of young boxing enthusiasts witnessed the contest. The second round Hampton was Roy Tibbs, for Peal was Dick Penn. William Zeiss refereed the splendid contest. Both the participants were in splendid training.

EXILED

TENNESSEE SENATORS GO BACK TO NASHVILLE.

Runaways Highly Pleased With the Treatment Accorded Them at Nashville.

Hopkinsville, Ky., March 6.—After spending the week here eight of Tennessee's twelve runaway state senators returned to Nashville Friday morning.

They were lavish in their expressions of appreciation for the marked attention that had been shown them here. They say that an agreement has been made whereby the coalitionists promise not to attempt to force a ratification of Wednesday's election, but will leave the matter as it now stands to be tried out by the courts.

Given Rousing Reception.

Nashville, Tenn., March 6.—Eight of the thirteen state senators who ran away from here to Hopkinsville, Ky., to break a quorum and thus prevent the passage of objectionable election bills, returned to Nashville from Kentucky at 10 o'clock Friday morning. The runaways were accorded a rousing reception when they stepped from the train at the Union station and were escorted to the capitol by their friends, where they took their usual seats in the senate chamber.

The remaining five runaways are expected here from Alabama today.

Paducah Boy Tells of His Journey With the Fleet.

Hanson McCann, of the battleship Kentucky, who is at home on a furlough visiting his father, Mr. Joseph A. McCann, 1041 Jefferson street, gave an interesting account of his experience on the trip around the world with the fleet, yesterday afternoon at Mrs. John J. Dorian's private school. It is Mr. McCann's first visit home in three years.

Mr. McCann is an entertaining speaker, and he told with enthusiasm many interesting and enjoyable features of the memorable journey. He was aglow with patriotism, too, and especially proud of his own ship. He said the Kentucky, notwithstanding it broke an engine valve at Gibraltar and had to come home with only one working engine, was in the best shape of any of the vessels and made a splendid record. Mr. Roosevelt's brother-in-law is his commander.

Notwithstanding the pleasures and the plaudits of the trip, Mr. McCann said that the most thrilling time to all was when from Gibraltar they faced homeward and from every jackstaff floated the Home Pennant, a flag 350 feet long, and on board every ship the bands played "Home, Sweet Home."

Mr. McCann expressed himself as more pleased with Japan and Australia than any of the countries, but glowingly said that Paducah held his best love still; and he was glad to be at home again. Mr. McCann was a pupil of the St. Mary's Academy before leaving here. He will address Mrs. Dorian's night school next Wednesday evening, and all friends of the school will be welcomed to hear him.

HEAVY TOBACCO SALES WILL HELP SPRING TRADE

Merchants Busy Preparing Stores For Heavy Spring Business.

Work Begins on Barge Fleet When River Falls.

OUTLOOK MOST ENCOURAGING

BANK CLEARINGS.

This week $564,753
Last week 663,185

At a period between spring and winter the merchants have found business just a little off this week and the clearings show the reflection, but still the merchants are busy preparing for an excellent spring business. The farmers have money because of the heavy sales of tobacco last month, and the spring trade is anticipated to pick up, and maintain a good stream of circulation of money.

The encouraging news from the east that there is every possibility of the Mergenthaler-Horton basket factory will be put in operation again, is received with pleasure by the citizens, for its operation will mean the employment of many laborers. High water has prevented the West-Kentucky Coal company from beginning work on its fleet of new barges, but timber has been ordered, and active work will begin early in the spring. Every contract was signed this week, and no longer is there any doubt of it proving a mirage.

Nearly all of the retail dealers have returned from the east after purchasing spring stocks, and already the shelves are beginning to groan under the weight of the bright new frocks. Even the newspaper advertisements tinge of spring, and many stores are making advance showing of early arrivals of the latest from the fashion's center.

In Principal Cities.

New York, March 6.—Total bank clearings compiled by Bradstreet's for the principal cities in the United States the past week, $3,336,711,000 against $2,211,533,000 in the corresponding time last year.

Engineer's Horrible Death

St. Paul, Minn., March 6.—N. C. Powers repairman and engineer of the Great Western pump house was killed last night by being caught in the machinery. The machinery was still running this morning and when Powers failed to appear his friends went to the pump house and found his mangled body that had been caught in the machinery and dashed to death against the cement floor. Every bone being broken. Bloody finger marks on the great fly wheel showed the desperate fight he had made to free himself.

Mrs. Elizabeth McClure

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth McClure, of Symsonia, died this morning at 3 o'clock at Riverside hospital after an illness of three months. Mrs. McClure is the mother of Mrs. B. H. Cornelson, of 418 Fountain avenue, and is survived by four other children: Mrs. Hattie Robinson, of Symsonia; Messrs. William McClure, Edward McClure and Cody McClure, all of Symsonia, and one brother, Mr. William Stiers.

Mrs. McClure was 60 years old and was born and reared in North Carolina. She has made Symsonia her home for a number of years and was a very much loved woman and had a large circle of friends. Mrs. McClure has been at the hospital only six days before her death.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock at her home in Symsonia. The burial will be in the family cemetery.

The Facts About Pe-ru-na.

Is Peruna an alcoholic beverage in disguise? Is it possible to use Peruna as a substitute for whiskey? Do people buy Peruna and use it as a toddy, or a bitters, or a brace?

It would be the easiest thing in the world for any one to demonstrate the falsity of such statements. Let any one go to the drug store and purchase a bottle of Peruna. Let him undertake to use it as a beverage, or take this remedy in doses considerably larger than those prescribed on the bottle. Would the result be alcoholic intoxication? Nothing of the sort. Let any one try it and see.

Peruna is a medicinal compound quite heavily loaded with medicinal ingredients. If taken in doses larger than prescribed it would produce a positive drug effect. No one could take it as a beverage. If any one doubts these statements, try it and see. We know that Peruna cannot be used as a beverage; that it will not intoxicate; that it cannot be used as a substitute for liquor. We guarantee that PERUNA CONTAINS NO CHEAP WHISKEY—OR ANY OTHER WHISKEY, for that matter.

It contains a small per cent. of cognac spirits, absolutely essential to dissolve and hold in solution medicinal ingredients, but the drugs contained in Peruna prohibit its use as a beverage. It would be the easiest thing in the world for any one to demonstrate this if they chose to do so.

Peruna is sold everywhere. THE INGREDIENTS ARE PLAINLY PRINTED ON EACH BOTTLE. It has been said over and over again that chemists have analyzed Peruna and found it to contain only cubes and whiskey. Now we challenge any chemist to demonstrate any such statement. Let any one who has even a smattering knowledge of chemistry purchase a bottle of Peruna and see whether or not it contains whiskey, find out for himself whether or not it is composed of cheap whiskey and cubes. Of course, cubes are one of the ingredients of Peruna, but there are many other ingredients. It contains hydnastis canadensis, corydalis formosa, collinsonia, and at least four other medicinal ingredients. To be sure, no chemist could so analyze Peruna as to be able to identify the various medicinal ingredients. This is beyond the ability of any chemist. But any ordinary chemist would be able to say that Peruna is heavily loaded with medicinal ingredients of some kind in addition to cubes.

Now why are these statements repeated when their falsity could be so easily demonstrated? Simply because there is continued hostility toward Peruna on the part of the medical profession. Very likely the magazines which took up the crusade against Peruna and denounced it as a cheap beverage were misled by statements of the medical profession. Probably they were sincere in their attitude towards it. But now, after all these things have been said and refuted, it would seem to be in order for such people to use a little fairness and common sense in the matter.

Every time any one says that Peruna is nothing but cheap whiskey and cubes he is telling a lie, an absolute falsehood. Most people intend to speak the truth. But the prevalent habit of repeating other people's statements, without investigation as to their truth, has led many well-meaning people to say these false things about Peruna.

Used according to the directions on the bottle, PERUNA IS A SAFE AND RELIABLE CATARRH REMEDY, but, like any other good medicine, if taken in excess of those doses, it will produce drug effects very unpleasant to the person who takes it.

It is therefore up to every honest person to quit making such statements concerning Peruna, or acknowledge that he is repeating slanders about which he knows nothing. One might just as well say that Castor Oil is an intoxicant; that if taken in large enough doses it will operate as a "booze." If people never tried to see, but simply repeated such statements about Castor Oil, the majority of people would come to believe them. It is no easier to demonstrate such a statement about Castor Oil than it would be about Peruna.

Any one who takes Peruna knows that such statements are false. To say that Peruna is cheap whiskey and cubes may constitute good material for jokes on the vaudeville stage, but there is no excuse for any one who pretends to be truthful saying over again this oft-repeated falsehood.

BASKETBALL TEAMS BRILLIANT CONTEST

Chess Team Wins After Hard Struggle.

Elks Beat Light and Power By a Score of 24 to 12.

THE K. C. TEAM WITHDRAWS

TEAMS.	W.	L.	PCT.
C. C. & W.	9	0	1000
D. A. D.	6	3	667
Elks	6	3	667
High School	3	5	375
L. & P.	2	6	250

The fastest and most exciting game of basketball ever played in the city league was last night when the Chess, Checker and Whist club and the High school teams had a keen fight. Height and weight were great odds against the plucky school lads, but the Chess team only won the game by the score of 20 to 20, when the team has won nearly all of its games by much larger scores. In the second half the High school team made eleven scores to six of the Chess team, which is the first time that the C. C. & W. quintet has been defeated in any half. In the first half the game stood 24 to 14.

During the first half the C. C. & W. players scored eleven goals from the field and two fouls, while the High school scored two goals from the field and four fouls. In the second half the Chess team scored one goal from the field and four fouls, but the High school scored four goals from the field and three fouls. That the High school team should put up such a good game against heavy odds was the surprise of many spectators, and even the C. C. & W. rooters were enthusiastic for the team work.

For both teams every player exerted himself. Evans, of High school, played hard, and was put out twice for a few minutes. Terrell did exceptional work as guard, while Henneberger, of the Chess team, did nice work.

The second game was between the Elks and the Light and Power teams and was captured by the Elks by the score of 24 to 12. The game was an exciting one, and despite the fact that the Elks led all the way the L. & P. boys were game and did not quit until the referee said so. The first half of the game ended 4 to 11 in favor of the B. P. O. E. Several difficult baskets were thrown.

The teams lined up: C. C. & W.—Singleton, center; R. Fisher and Pusey, forwards; W. Henneberger and St. John, guards. High School—King, center; Evans and Brownling, forwards; Silks and Terrell, guards. Elks—Goodman, center; Sutton and H. Henneberger, forwards; Daley and Warren, guards. L. & P.—W. Fisher, center; Ogilvie and Young, forwards; Rayburn and Simpson, guards. The officials were: Elliott, referee; Lydon, umpire; Kelley, timekeeper; Hatfield, scorer.

The Knights of Columbus have withdrawn from the league and now to the finish the league will have five teams. Six more games will be played and then the season will end April 1. Next Tuesday night another double-header will be played between two teams, which have not been announced.

News of Theatres

Good plays, after all, can come out of Paris. "The Thief," which billed at the Kentucky theatre to-night is one of these and is pronounced to be by far the best that has ever emanated from that gay capital in many years. The play is said to demonstrate most emphatically that human nature is by no means the complex thing that writers of problem dramas would have us believe. The play is human. Its central figure—a married woman is not a kleptomaniac, but a thief—in this distinction altogether is said to rest the power of the piece.

Clarence Bennett's beautiful scenic production will be at the Kentucky on March 15th. This play has been one of the biggest successes of the past two years.

J. A. Coburn's Greater Minstrels, which comes Monday night, this season is a good singing show. The voices are individually strong and blend beautifully while the volume is incredible and equal to a company twice its size. Among the soloists T. B. Gremmer, Interlocutor and stage manager possesses a sweet high baritone and pleasing personality and is featuring "Two Blue Eyes" and "Dixie and the Girl I Love," two very beautiful march songs. Mr. Wm. Burns, a high tenor, of flute like calibre, is singing the beautiful waltz number "See Saw" and "There Never Was a Girl Like You" and two of the season's big hits. Robert T. Wade, a robust baritone with deep, full quality and range, sings "You've Always Been the Same Old Pal" and "When Sweet Marie Was Sweet Sixteen." Mr. Harry Coughlan, a robust tenor, singing "Sweet Heart Days and "Some Day When Dreams Come True" is one of the best voices in the company, while Chas. A. Koster, a contra tenor and yodler, presents the most pleasing numbers of the program.

As a play Frederic Thompson's production of Margaret Mayo's play proved to have a humor and pathos that appealed and its publication as a story will but add to its popularity. "Polly" is the star rider of the circus, the child of a long line of performers with a love for the work and excitement in her blood. She is without education, except as the old circus people have given her haphazard instruction. Fate decrees that one night she stumbles as she jumps through the hoops and is injured. The circus cannot wait for accidents, and she is carried to the house, which happens to be a paragon whose minister is young, handsome and unmarried. "Polly" is but a child, barely seventeen and at first the busy-bodies of the parish see no harm in her remaining under the care of the minister's kindly housekeeper. But she recovers and, under the guidance of the minister, makes great improvement in her education, until she develops, in a short time, into a lovable child woman. Then the deacons, egged on by their wives, hold indignation meetings and "Polly" is told of their decision that she must go, but everything ends happily. Miss Edith Tallafiero, who plays "Polly," has been before the public for a dozen years and has been connected with more successful productions than any actor or actress in America, she being the youngest leading woman on the English speaking stage. Mr. Thompson has surrounded her with a splendid cast and elaborate scenic equipment.

This attraction comes to the Kentucky for two nights, March 17 and 18.

Mr. Dooley, the wisest sage of the day, and wittiest, in a discourse on the stage a few days ago, says:

"It seems to me," said Mr. Dooley, "it's time these here attacks on Art should be stopped."

"What's the matter?" asked Mr. Hennebery.

"Well," said Mr. Dooley, "a lot of narrow-minded people, who have no idea of Art at all, are makin' an attack on th' modern stage. They say it is immoral an' has a bad effect on th' youth iv th' land an' ought to be reformed. An' why, I ask ye? Simply because iv th' Inthrest in Art an' fr' no other reason, th' theatrical managers iv th' country are eliminatin' clothing as inartistic an' are attempting to reprojoice life as it exists in parts iv th' wurld well known to th' polis fr' th' blifft iv humanity."

Somewan goes to th' theayter an' sees an actor lady on th' stage dressed fr' sleep if she hadn't forgotten something, an' th' first thing ye know th' second lady fr'm th' left end iv th' first row iv th' chorus is arrested fr' not wearing enough rooching around her neck.

"Strange to say, both sides admit that th' theayter is an idjocational institution. I never thought iv it that way. I always supposed that people went to th' theayter because they had no comfortable homes to go to, or to frigit that th' dishes weren't washed, or to laugh or cry or have a good spell iv coughing where it wud attract attention. But it seems I was wrong."

"The theayter is intinded to be more like a night school thin a circus. It's a good thing fr' th' theayters that th' people that go to th' thing don't know this. If they felt they were being idjocated when they thought they were 'neglectin' their minds they'd mob th' box office to get their money back. Any recollection they have iv idjocation is clouded with sorrow."

Mr. Dooley tells what his friend Hogan says about "Salomy" in his own inimitable way:

"Salomy." Ye never heard iv "Salomy"? Well, 'tis a quaint little thing—ahrdly up to th' robust intelligence iv a grown man—more suited to childer an' medical experts. Hogan want to see it th' other night."

"What was it like?" says I. "It was an artistic performance," says he. "Ye don't say?" says I. "Was it really that bad? Wait a minyit till I look th' dure an' pull down th' shades. Now, tell me all about it."

"Well," says Hogan, "th' play was wrote by a man that I won't mention th' name iv or ye'd throw me out. 'Twas set to music by a German musician by th' name iv Strauss. I never heard more thrillin' music. All th' time I felt as if I was in a dentist's chair havin' me tooth filled by a plumber's helper. This grand composer is th' first man to intrajooce a scissors grinder, a man filin' a saw an' a lawn mower into an orchestra. It isn't th' kind iv music ye wud like. Ye cudden't whistle annything in it. Ye might cough it or ye might reprojoice it be shakin' the stove an' steppin' on th' dog's tail at th' same time, but ye cudden't whistle it. It's what ye might call a quarrelsome kind iv music with all th' instruments hurlin' insults at each other. But 'tis well suited to th' play."

"Th' play was taken fr'm th' bible, but I doubt if it wud fit into th' place if they tried to put it back. Th' author done it over in a way that gives ye a delightful sensation iv wondhrin' what name ye will inivat at th' station when th' place is pulled be th' polis."

"I never was so horrified an' shocked in me life. It was worth twenty times th' price iv admission. An' th' th' dancing! My, but it was fine! Ye see, th' lady in this biblical drama has a saint's head cut off because she is in love with him an' thin does a dance in front iv th' head. It is a pretty conceit an' charmingly depleted. I will say nawthin' about what she wore an' I have now described her costume. But I didn't think iv that—it was all so graceful, so artistic, th' poetry iv motion."

"I'm sorry I f'got me opy glasses. Th' next time I go I'll get a front seat an' take along a tiliyscope. Ye bet I will. But there was nawthin' vulgar about it. Not a thing. When th' great artist come out an' began to hop the man settin' next to me, a man not aissy moved be th' higher things iv life, give me a dig in th' ribs with his elbow an' whispered: 'I'll risk wad eye on it, annyhow.' But it's no use thryin' to describe it to ye'er vulgar mind, Martin. Ye don't understand Art," says he. "I understand, Hogan," says I.

He goes to the theater with Hogan one night and his recital is side splitting:

"We're goin' to th' most modhren playhouse in existance," says Hogan. "Ye'll be surprised at th' sumchness iv it," says he. In time we arrive at th' temple an' after bein' scoutinized be th' men at th' dure to make sure we got our tickets fr'm th' speculator we are conducted down a runway by a young man, wao pushes a program into me stomach an' pints to two seats that seem to be as far away as San Francisco with a large part iv th' population iv America between."

"These here devotees iv th' drama are settin' with their coats on their laps an' their knees closely pressed again th' seats iv th' row in front. They greet me with an expression iv great agony. 'How am I goin' to get in?' says I. 'In me youth I cud hurdle thim, but if I thried it now I'd only land in th' lap iv that stout lady whose vilet eyes at this monyit denounce me as a murderer,' says I.

"Go on in," says Hogan. 'I feel th' hot flush iv shame mantling me brow, but I take th' plunge. A groan iv misery goes up fr'm th' row as th' ladies collect their hats, coats, fans, handkerchiefs, programs, and bottles iv smellin' salts in a large bundle an' slowly rise an' stand in a furrus row. Th' gentlemen back up against their new silk hats in th' commojous racks provided by a lib'ral management under th' chairs. Th' space thus left between thim an' th' backs iv th' people in front is meant fr' me triumphal entry."

"How I got through I'll never tell ye. Me figure is suitable to a man iv dignified years an' pursuits. I have a recollection iv shrieks iv pain, muttered oaths, th' tearin' an' rendin' iv garments. Th' back buttons iv me coat became locked in a buckle belt. I tore meself loose with a superhuman effort stepped on a hat, an' found meself at me seat, with a feather boa around me legs an' me watch an' chain hangin' on th' ear iv a man in front iv me."

"At last I was safe, but I dared not look behind at th' desolation on' room I had wrought. I soon recovered meself. I placed me overcoat on th' rack under th' seat. Onforchintely I f'got to lower th' seat before attemptin' to get in it. This incident seemed pleasin' to th' audience an' made me avenin' more enjoyable thin it might've been otherwise."

"Nawthin' is more comfortable thin a modhren playhouse, except, p'rhaps, th' upper birth in a sleep'car. They are too luxurious. Th' people iv this generation are pampered. Why shud th' managers iv th' theayters be called on to place th' rows iv seats so near together that even a small man can rest his knees on th' back iv a friend in front iv him? Why should they be so luxuriously arranged that all ye have to do is to leave ye'er seat to start a speakin' acquaintance with ivrybody in th' same row. I hadn't been in th' house two-minyits before there wasn't wan iv me neighbors who hadn't spoken to me, if it was no more thin to say, 'Get off me feet!' But I'm what Hogan calls a siburite, I guess, an' I revealed in th' luxury."

"I cud hardly believe it was true, me settin' there in a graceful attitude like a jackknife an' dhrinkin' in th' air that two thousand other people had used, countin' th' number iv pleasure lovers that had a cold in their head. I cud see where th' lawn in front iv th' duke's palace was sewed up with white thread an' I wondhered why they hadn't hung th' storm at sea on a clothesline an' bato

I got th' plot fr'm what th' servant girl said while dislin' off th' furniture in th' first act an' I knew how it wud come out. A MARCH FANTASY.

Under the clear but wind-blown skies
I saw the round March moon arise,
Silver disk on an emerald sea,
And there it rested; while, drunk
with glee,
Over and round it, all together,
The March hares chased for a flying feather:
A golden feather that blew and blew
Over and over and round it, too!
And the young-old, wise, little, merry mad fawns
Laughed out under their buttony horns—
Shrieking, "Blow on, you folly-bright
feather!
Run, Mad Hares, in the wild March weather!"

Some Club Officers for 1909-1910.

Several of the clubs held annual elections this week instead of the regular programs; and mapped out their work for the ensuing club year.

The Delphic club on Tuesday morning at the Delphic room in the Carnegie library, elected its officers for the club year, beginning October 5, 1909, as follows: Mrs. Alonzo R. Meyers, president; Mrs. Edmund M. Post, vice-president; Miss Kathleen Whitefield, secretary; Mrs. George A. Flournoy, treasurer; Delphic librarian, Mrs. Elizabeth Austin. The club will devote the next two years to a study of the British Empire.

The Woman's club at its regular meeting on Thursday afternoon at the club house, elected officers for three positions as follows: Second vice-president, Mrs. John G. Miller; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Boyd; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Arch Sutherland.

The Kalosophic club re-elected its present officers at the business meeting on Friday morning. They are: Mrs. Edward H. Bringham, president; Miss Lula Reed, vice-president; Miss Philippa Hughes, secretary and treasurer; Miss Caroline Sowell, corresponding secretary. The club study, France; its history, literature and art for the next two years.

Paducah Woman's Club Endorses Dr. Wiley.

The following resolutions sent to the Paducah Woman's club by Miss Lillia Reed, chairman of the food sanitation committee of the Kentucky Federation of Women's clubs, were approved by the club at its business meeting on Thursday afternoon:

Whereas, It appears through press reports and from other sources, that a bitter, personal attack is being made on Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the United States department of agriculture, and

Whereas, Such attacks, seemingly, are fostered by certain food producing interests and the manufacturers of fake remedies and design to force Dr. Wiley from his position as chief officer of the pure food law, and

Whereas, It seems that an organized movement among the enemies of the national food law covering the entire nation has been formed to injure Dr. Wiley's reputation and secure his removal, and

Whereas, We believe the service rendered by Dr. Wiley in the past has been strictly in public interest, and

Whereas, We believe that he should have full power to act in the protecting of the helpless public against the use of coloring fluids, preservatives and other devices for hiding defects in food products to the damage of both the consumer and the honest manufacturer, therefore be it,

Resolved, That we as members of the General Federation of Women's clubs express our disapproval of such attacks on Dr. Wiley and his official status as calculated to unjustly injure a faithful, public servant, whose services are and have been for many years of inestimable benefit and value to the public, and to weaken the effectiveness, and power of the pure food law.

Resolved, That we give our strongest endorsement and appeal to the president of the United States and the secretary of agriculture for the preservation of the powers of the office untrammelled, which Dr. Wiley has so long and courageously exercised, and that the undersigned pledge our support to him in the furtherance of the protection of the consumer, and the honest manufacturer. Signed: PADUCAH WOMAN'S CLUB

Social Secretary to Mrs. Taft.

Miss Alice Blech, an attaché of the Bureau of American Republics, has been selected by Mrs. Taft as her social secretary. She succeeds Miss Isabelle Hagner, the first woman to hold the position of social secretary to the wife of a president.

Miss Taylor is prominently known throughout the state. It is her first trial at newspaper work. Mrs. Cassidy succeeded Miss Chaplins on the Courier-Journal, when she married Haynes McFadden, the Nashville newspaper man. The Courier-Journal must have Dan Cupid as assistant society reporter.

Beware the Tan of March.

A grandmother's theory is that the maiden who would be of fair face must avoid March winds as she would avoid the plague says the Woman's Natural Journal. It is remarked that the one who will take good care of the face during the month when the winds are troublesome and play havoc with most complexions has the tan-proof complexion. A roughened, tanned skin is not easily removed. Many persons can not wear a veil. The veil is quite injurious to persons with impaired vision and one worn during the day is liable to cause severe headache, but if one can not wear the veil, she is not denied the use of harmless creams that dry upon the face. Healthy tan is rather becoming to some persons, though heavy tan is positively disfiguring and one must bear in mind the grand mother's warning and avoid spring tan.

The Latin Women Versus the Anglo-Saxons.

Carolina Holman Huldoborff, a Chilean lecturer, took a few raps at armies, navies, wars, and things like that before the Women's Peace circle at the Hotel Astor, New York, this week. Senorita Huldoborff said her sex typified peace and if there was a fight in the animal kingdom the male always began the fray. She paid her compliments to the Army and Navy league and said the laziest man in the world was one who drew salary from the government for the privilege of wearing a blue coat, brass buttons, and epaulets. Senorita Huldoborff said she knew something about the domestic game, too.

There was a gasp of apparent surprise when the speaker said she was 54 years old. Continuing, she said women of Spanish America do not swing lazily in hammocks and had

THE PRESIDENT TO THE NATION

Very few inaugural addresses have been scanned with more interest than will be that with which the new president began his administration. It deserves and will support the careful scrutiny of his countrymen. It is interesting and significant both for what it contains and for what it does not contain, for what it is and for what it is not, for its matter and for its manner, says the Chicago Tribune.

By its personal the people will discern more clearly than ever that a very different man from the preceding president is now the chief magistrate of the nation and that a very different administration from his predecessor's has begun.

During the campaign Mr. Taft was frequently spoken of and, in cities, at least, placarded as "the business man's" candidate. His inaugural address substantially bears out the claim. It is an assurance that one of the main considerations of the present administration will be the careful adjustment of the new legislation to the business activities of the nation to the end that "proper and progressive methods" may be safeguarded and encouraged, rights and wrongs more definitely ascertained, and enterprise assured of the necessary security and freedom which it can enjoy only when reform has reached the stage of complete definition.

The utterance of the new president upon regulatory legislation, upon tariff revision, upon monetary reform should and undoubtedly will establish the returning confidence of the business world and inaugurate a period of renewed prosperity which, as we believe, may prove sounder and broader as well as greater than any the nation has enjoyed.

At the same time the new president takes pains to assure the people that the greatly needed reforms accomplished under the leadership of Mr. Roosevelt will not be abated a jot if his will prevails in the national councils. There is to be no step backward in what are termed the Roosevelt policies as their author, and to maintain them and perfect them he pledges himself freely and unequivocally.

Compared to the remarkable utterances of Mr. Roosevelt, the contrast throws this administrative aspect of the address into higher relief than if the comparison were with the messages of Mr. Roosevelt's predecessors. But though there is an striking absence of the social and ethical generalizations which Mr. Roosevelt made so influential, there is no lack of definite statement of policy.

The new president's thorough knowledge of our foreign relations and his enlightened sense of their importance are factors not only in our own national economic and political welfare but in world politics as well. And every thoughtful American should read with especial care what are perhaps the gravest passages of Mr. Taft's first presidential pronouncement—namely, those which urge the necessity of adequate naval and military armament.

In this as in other vital matters Mr. Taft is at one with Mr. Roosevelt, and it is not in the temper of the jingo or of the alarmist that the new president solemnly declares the importance of an army and navy commensurate with our responsibilities. There has never been a president less likely to consent to play the bully. There has never been one, we believe, who would more firmly withhold the blow. There has never been one, we believe, who was more anxious for honorable peace nor able with greater skill, temperance, and amiability to guide the government through international difficulties.

But as an altruist, as well as one who recognizes the nation's rights of self-interest, the new president demands that our arm be strong. To live in peace and amity with all peoples is our aim. But it must be the peace of courage and the amity of mutual respect.

President Taft enters upon his great task with the hope of a people to spur him on and their respect and confidence to stay him. Not merely his party may be proud of him, but this whole frank, strong and friendly American people, north and south, east and west, who know how to admire the plain honesty of act and speech, the warm and brave heart, the sane and well-stored brain, the arduous and useful service, and the unsurpassed patriotism of William Howard Taft.

SOME STORIES AROUND TOWN

The following from the Courier-Journal will be enjoyed by Bishop Woodcock's many Paducah admirers: Bishop Charles E. Woodcock is without a peer when it comes to telling an Irish dialect story the way it ought to be told. He produced one the other evening that went something like this:

"Two Irishmen met in the road, and as one of them wore a very doleful expression the other one asked, 'Why, Pat, phwat ails ye?'

"'Worra, worra,' the other replied, 'me pet chameleon is dead.'

"'Chameleon? And phwat's a chameleon?' the other queried, the rising infection at the end denoting almost unbelief in the existence of such a thing.

"'A chameleon, the bereaved owner explained, 'is a little reptile that spins its toime changing colors. If ye put it on green it turns green.'

"'Will, now, that's certain a in-threstin' animil, shure. And what kilt 'im?'

"'The pore little feller died of ambition. He happened to get onto a Scotch plaid, and before I could rescue him he bust.'

When Mr. Taft and President Roosevelt met Thursday morning in the breakfast room of the white house Mr. Taft's greeting to the man he was so soon to succeed was: "Mr. President, even the elements protest." "Mr. President-elect," quickly rejoined Mr. Roosevelt, "I knew there would be a blizzard clear up to the minute I went out of office."

THE SPECTATOR.

Weekly Comments on Things About Town.

The Spectator's attention was attracted to two signs flanking either side of the steps leading into one of the downtown churches, which bore the legend, "NO LOAFING." Now everyone despises a loafer, and yet everyone loafs. To loaf under certain obvious conditions is one of the inalienable rights of man, which ought to have been incorporated in the constitution along with those other inalienable rights of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." And everyone loafs. The flattered belle of society, retires to her boudoir, dons the bewitching kimono, and proceeds to loaf in an aesthetic way. Her older and more strenuous sister, in the lull between clubs and clublets, "relaxes" (another term for "to loaf") After the day's work, the husband and father settles down to the enjoyment of a loaf, in slippers and old coat, with his trusty briar or corncob for companion, and the evening paper an excuse. To loaf or not to loaf, is not the question, for everyone loafs in some way or another, but the question which many a man is up against in this city is, where to loaf. For man is a gregarious animal, as the naturalists tell us, or a social being, as the sociologists put it, and when he loafs he wishes companionship, he wishes to loaf in company. Therefore it was that when the Spectator saw that sign, "NO LOAFING," although he recognized that the front steps of that particular church were no place for a decent loaf, he wondered really where many a man could go to loaf, to smoke his pipe or cigar, read his paper, and have a bit of companionship. It is true that this is largely a city of homes, and the man of family has his own fire-side and easy chair to help him loaf properly, and his family, or some neighbor, to keep him company. But besides these favored mortals, the family man, there are in our midst some hundreds, to put it conservatively, of men who have neither home nor family here, the transients, roomers, boarders. Where do they loaf? The Spectator wonders. Not in the forlorn surroundings of the average rented room, alone and solitary, not in the "best room" or parlor of the average rooming house, not here certainly,—but where do they and where can they really loaf, when it is their right by every law of justice to loaf. There is the reading room of the public library, an institution of which we are so justly proud. But loafing is the last thing that its quiet orderliness and restraint suggests, and a pipe or cigar in such surroundings could scarcely be tolerated, and certainly not enjoyed. Now the library has a basement floor, seldom if ever used, except for the meetings of a woman's club, and occasional meetings for the school children,—and the Spectator has often wondered why it has not occurred to the board to utilize this basement for a smoking and reading room for those who need it most. But this is a pipe dream of the future,—and we come back to the question, Where can a man without a home or family spend a quiet and pleasant evening in the whole city, where? Not in the several men's clubs of various names and purposes, as these are of necessity limited to their membership. We turn to the churches, owning something more than two hundred thousand dollars' worth of property and buildings, but does the door or lecture room or assembly or room of any other name about this church property open for the man who just wants a pleasant evening, a place to loaf. Not one. But a man must loaf, and a man will loaf, and the church and the library and the club supplies no place, and the solitary lodging room is intolerable and there is no place for such as he. No place,—yes there is,—the door of the saloon is always open, and a welcome there is always awaiting him. The Spectator has no intention at this or any other time of entering into a discussion of temperance and prohibition, let alone the lawyers say, but he would like to ask, if the saloons go, what then? What is offered to take the place of the light and warmth and cheer and companionship that men want, and can get nowhere else but here? While we are getting statistics on the subject, let us hear how many men on a given evening, found in the saloons, went there, not for the glass that inebriates as well as cheers, but wholly and simply for light and warmth, a place to smoke, a place to read, a place to meet and talk? Instead of saying to the stranger in our midst, and the man without a home, You shall not enter a saloon, let some one wise enough and strong enough arise, and find a place where a man can exercise in comfort that right to loaf, after the day's work is over, which every father exercises in the home he is so fortunate to possess and every mother exercises by the hearth-stone where she reigns as queen. Let us find a place where any man, simply because he is a man can come for a quiet evening, a quiet smoke if he will, a friendly chat, a little companionship.

FAREWELL BANQUET GIVEN DR. PERRYMAN

By Citizens and Ministers of Knoxville.

Had Been Potent Factor in Shaping the Destinies of Tennessee City.

ACCEPTS CALL TO NORFOLK.

To show their esteem for the Rev. G. W. Perryman, formerly pastor of the First Baptist church in Paducah, the citizens of Knoxville, Tenn., gave him a banquet last Monday night. Dr. Perryman has resigned his pastorate to accept a church in Norfolk, Va. Of the banquet the Knoxville Journal and Tribune says:

"As evidence of the esteem in which he is held, and of appreciation for his works while a resident of this city, seventy-five citizens of Knoxville gathered about the banquet board at the Colonial hotel last evening and broke bread with Rev. G. W. Perryman, who is soon to leave for Norfolk to take up his work in that city, following his years as pastor of the Dederick Avenue Baptist church in this city. Dr. Perryman has been a prominent figure in the church work and in the politics of this city, and in quite recent years he has been a potent factor in shaping the destinies of the city. To a large extent he bore the brunt of the prohibition fight here and did great work in making Knoxville a saloonless city. It was fitting therefore, that when he is about to conclude his work here, that those who have worked as his aides and have been drawn to his side where the battles were sternly waged, should honor him with a farewell banquet.

"Scheduled to begin at 9 o'clock, it was 9:35 before the banqueters seated themselves at the long and inviting table at the Colonial dining room. Mine Host Victor Selas had prepared a tempting menu and for the next two hours it was given minute inspection and favorable consideration. Presided over by Capt. William Rule, editor of the Journal and Tribune, who was called to serve as toastmaster in the absence of Hon. John K. Shields, of the Tennessee supreme court, who sent a telegram regretting his inability to be present, the banquet will not soon be forgotten by those attending. It was 11:35 o'clock when Capt. Rule rapped for order as the last course was being given consideration. Capt. Rule, referring to the toast-cards which announced that Judge Shields would preside as toastmaster, stated that Judge Shields was not present, and he thereupon read a telegram from Judge Shields stating that conditions over which he had no control prevented his being present, and concluding with felicitations for Dr. Perryman. Capt. Rule then issued warning that he "would get the axe" for any speakers who dared to trespass upon the patience of the audience at such an hour by running over the five minute mark with their talks.

Ed F. Pixler Injured.

Ed F. Pixler formerly of Brookport but now of Benkleman, Mo., was seriously injured last Monday by falling from a coal chute on the B. & M. railroad. He was opening a coal chute when he slipped and fell head first to the ground, a distance of 35 feet. He was not knocked unconscious and walked to the station. A medical examination revealed that nine ribs were broken and internal injuries sustained.

A. L. Lassiter, the architect, has been ill of grip since Wednesday.

Dear Sirs:—I received today the full amount due me under policy No. 69210 for $205.00 on the life of my daughter, Miss Carrie E. Warren, who died Feb. 22nd, 1909.

The promptness with which you have settled this claim is much appreciated, as the proofs of death were not received by you until the 24th, and today I received payment in full, and also I desire to say that your policies are most liberal. "GET IT AT GILBERT'S"

IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

Glad to Know We Did Not Miss It. The Daily Kentucky New Era, Hopkinsville, says:

"Although no effort was made to keep it a secret, the news has just become generally known of the marriage of January 21 of Miss Mattie Brown, the accomplished official court stenographer of the Third Judicial district, and Mr. Thomas Gayle Houston, the popular gentleman who has charge of the billiard parlors at Hotel Latham. They were quietly married at the home of Rev. S. B. Moore, of the Christian church, in Paducah. The papers of Paducah published notice of the issuance of the license and even of the ceremony, but none seemed to realize who the parties were until recently when lengthy notices were given the affair. Mr. and Mrs. Houston will make their quarters here. Mrs. Houston is fulfilling her regular duties at the present term of circuit court."

In Honor of Birthday.

Music was enjoyed, and a forest contest was held Miss Annabel Grainger winning the prize for correctly guessing the number of trees represented.

NEWS OF COURTS

Suits Filed.

Dr. H. P. Sights filed suit against the Illinois Central railroad this afternoon in circuit court for $5,500 damages as the result of personal injuries. In the petition it is cited that Dr. Sights was a passenger on a train between Paducah and Mayfield on March 10, 1908, and because of careless and bad equipment he was thrown from his seat and several ribs were broken. Permanent injury has been sustained, and he was damaged $500 in his practice, and $5,000 because of the injuries.

Bitten by Dog.

Mr. Frank Davis, of the Paducah Traction company, was bitten in the thick part of his left hand last evening, while playing with a bull dog pup belonging to Mr. George Phillips. This morning Mr. Davis had to go to a physician and have the wound dressed and he is now under the physician's care. Just a year ago Mr. Davis was bitten on the right hand by a beetle and came very near losing his right arm.

ELOQUENT TRIBUTE

PAID TO MEMORY OF REV. WARNER MOORE AT RIPLEY.

Business Suspended During the Services, Which Were Largely Attended.

Ripley, Tenn., March 6.—As a token of the high esteem in which the late Rev. Warner Moore, D. D., was held in Ripley as a divine and Christian gentleman, practically all business was suspended for over an hour yesterday morning during the funeral services, which were held at the Methodist church at 11 o'clock. No death, perhaps, that ever occurred in Lauderdale county's capital created more genuine regret than that of the eminent divine, and the sorrow and gloom reached outside the domain of his church into the homes of the entire community. Many of the doctor's friends from neighboring towns were present, and the auditorium of the Methodist church was taxed beyond its capacity. The floral decorations were many and beautiful.

At 10:30 o'clock many friends had assembled at the parsonage, and here the official board of the church took charge of the remains and carried them to the church building. The active pallbearers were: E. M. Rice, A. C. Durham, G. W. Partee, C. R. Barber, J. B. Mitchell and C. S. Carney. The honorary pallbearers were: W. B. Williams, T. D. Cobb, M. M. Hailton, M. F. Given, J. W. Watkins and J. W. Hedgepeth.

The church services were impressive. The opening scripture was read by the Rev. J. G. Clark, presiding elder of Union City district, followed by the Rev. W. F. Barrier. Following this the Rev. W. C. Waters, of Trenton, offered a fervent prayer. The song, "Lead Me Gently Home," was splendidly rendered by Mrs. R. S. Banks, Miss Julia Meadows and the Rev. G. H. Martin. The great throng was greatly touched by this selection, as it was one the pastor had selected for next Sunday morning's service.

Dr. Bolling's Tribute.

The eloquent tribute to the deceased, delivered by Dr. W. T. Bolling, of Paris, was prefaced by these words: "I know not what to say, for this occasion marks the coming of a loss to the church, and a grief to this community, but to me it brings a personal and heavy individual sorrow beyond words to express." A large per cent of the congregation seemed to sympathize with the grief-stricken preacher in the same sense, realizing a personal loss in the death of Dr. Moore.

Dr. Johnston Talked.

Following this Dr. H. B. Johnston, presiding elder of the Dryersburg district, made a short talk, enlarging the life of the deceased in the most eloquent manner.

Revs. J. J. Thomas, G. H. Martin and C. A. Waterfield sang "Beautiful Isle Somewhere." After the services at the church were concluded the remains were taken in charge by the Masonic order and laid to rest in beautiful Maplewood cemetery with honors of the order the deceased so much cherished.

All the children of Dr. Moore were here. Albert Moore, of Memphis; Rev. Yates Moore and wife, of Stanton; Frank Moore, Jr., of Mayfield, Ky.; Frank Moore and wife, Rev. and Mrs. E. W. Moore, Ramsey, Tenn.; Mrs. Nell Wilson, of this place; Mrs. Little M. Estes and children, of Orysa, this county, were also here. Mrs. Estes is the only sister of Dr. Moore, and was almost idolized by him.

There were some fifteen or more visiting ministers present, among whom were Dr. W. T. Bolling, Revs. J. G. Clark, C. A. Coleman, W. C. Waters, W. D. Jenkins, J. J. Thomas, T. J. McGill, G. B. Baskerville, John T. Myers, W. D. Drake, H. B. Johnston, S. H. Blackwell, G. G. Martin, C. A. Waterfield, Yates Moore, W. F. Barrier, T. G. Lowry and W. E. Humphreys.

S.S.S. REMOVES THE CAUSE OF CATARRH

No remedy that does not entirely remove the cause of Catarrh from the blood will ever make a permanent cure of the trouble. Just as long as the circulation remains contaminated with the impurities and catarrhal matters which produce the trouble, the mucous membranes or inner linings of the body will be kept in a state of irritation and disease. Sprays, lotions and other local applications will sometimes temporarily relieve the tight, full feeling in the head, buzzing noises in the ears, uncomfortable, stuffy feeling of the nostrils, and help to loosen the mucus in the throat; but Catarrh is a constitutional blood disorder and until it has been entirely driven from the system there can be no permanent cure. S. S. S. cures Catarrh by removing the cause from the blood. It attacks the disease at its head and by thoroughly purifying and cleansing the circulation, and ridding it of every particle of impurity, and at the same time enriching the blood, allows the inflamed and irritated membranes to heal, improves the general health, and stops every disagreeable symptom. S. S. S. reaches down to the very bottom and leaves no trace of the disease in the system. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice free to all who write.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT AS AN EDITOR

Has Article in Outlook Rapping Yellow Journals.

Retiring President Asserts Printing of Truth is Great Benefit to the Nation.

LAUDS THE CONSCIENTIOUS PEN

New York, March 6.—Theodore Roosevelt, formerly president of the United States, is now an editor. In this week's issue The Outlook, with the names of the editor in chief, associate editor and managing editor, his name appears as contributing editor, and under date of March 5 he contributes his first signed editorial to that publication. It is entitled, "Why I Believe in the Kind of Journalism for Which The Outlook Stands."

Mr. Roosevelt is welcomed to the staff of The Outlook in a signed editorial by Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor in chief, which reads in part:

"It would be a singular affection to introduce to the readers of The Outlook its new associate editor, Theodore Roosevelt. He is the most widely known representative of the present world movement toward industrial democracy. * * * Unconsciously co-operating, we have pursued a common and which in the future we shall pursue in conscious co-operation. Our resolve is that the money power in America, as its political and educational power, shall come from the people, be exercised for the people and be controlled by the people. Our motto is: 'Special privilege for none, equality of opportunity for all.'"

Good Journalism Praised.

In his first signed editorial as a member of the staff of The Outlook, Mr. Roosevelt says:

"Every owner, editor or reporter of a conscientiously and ably conducted newspaper or periodical is an asset of real value to the whole community. It would be difficult to overestimate the amount of good which can be done by the men responsible for such a publication—responsible for its news columns, responsible for its general policy. We have many newspapers and periodicals, big and little, of this kind. But we also have many that are emphatically not of this kind."

"During the last few years it has become lamentably evident that certain daily newspapers, certain periodicals, are owned or controlled by men of wealth, who have gained their wealth in evil fashion, who desire to stifle or twist the honest expression of public opinion, and who find an instrument fit for their purpose in the guided and purchased mendacity of those who edit and write for such papers and periodicals. * * *

Takes Rap at Cynics.

"These men sneer at the very idea of paying heed to the dictates of a sound morality. As one of their number has cynically put it, they are concerned merely with selling the public whatever it will buy—a theory of conduct which would justify the existence of every keeper of an opium den, of every foul creature who ministers to the vices of mankind. Here, again, it is perhaps not especially to the credit of Dr. Abbott and his associates that they have avoided this pit; fortunately, they are so constituted that it is a simple impossibility for them to fall into it."

"But they do deserve very great credit for avoiding another type of temptation which has much fascination for men of cultivation and of refined taste, and which is quite as fatal to their usefulness as indulgence in yellow journalism. * * * A cultivated man, of good intelligence, who has acquired the knack of saying bitter things, but who lacks the robustness which will enable him to feel at ease among strong men of action, is apt, if his nature has in it anything of meanness or untruthfulness, to strive for a reputation in what is to him the easiest way. He can find no work which is easier—and less worth doing than to sit in cloistered aloofness from the men who wage the real and important struggles of life and to endeavor by an unceasing output of slander in re-

Lesser of Two Evils.

"Now a paper edited by men of this stamp does not have much popular influence and therefore is less detrimental to the people at large than yellow journalism, but it may, to the extent of its power, exert a very real influence for evil, by the way in which it teaches young men of good education, whose talents should be at their country's service, that deceit and upright public men are as properly subjects of foul attack as the most debased corruptionist is, that efficiency and wickedness are interchangeable and that the correct attitude to adopt, in facing the giant problems of our great and troubled time, is one of sneering and supercilious untruthfulness."

"Dr. Abbott and his associates have avoided this pitfall also. With them cultivation and good taste have not implied weakness. Demand for righteousness in others has not led to abandonment of truth on their own part. * * *

Praises Love of Truth.

"The Outlook has shown a fine scorn of untruth in every form, of unfairness and injustice to any man or any cause. It is not given to humanity never to err, but the Outlook makes a resolute effort to find out what the facts actually are before passing judgment. * * * It champions the rights of the many. It desires in every way to represent, to guide aright and to uphold the interests of those whom Abraham Lincoln called the plain people. It feels a peculiar desire to do all that can be done for the poor and the oppressed, and to help upward those struggling to better themselves. But it has no sympathy with moral weakness or sentimentality. All that it can do it does and will do for the cause of labor, but it will in no shape or way condone violence or disorder. It stands for the rights of property, and therefore against the abuses of property. CHAPTER XI.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE "INSIDERS."

COLONEL J. D. TELFER, J. D. standing for Jefferson Davis, he explained proudly to Haines proved a warm advocate of the doubtful merits of Gulf City as a hundred million dollar naval base. His flushed face grew redder, his long white hair became disordered, and he tugged at his white mustache continually as he waxed warmer in his efforts to impress the senator's secretary.

"I tell you, Mr. Haines, Gulf City, sah, heads all the south when it comes to choosin' ground fo' a naval base. Her vast expanse of crystal sea, her miles upon miles of silv'ly sands, sah, protected by a natural harbor and th' islands of Mississippi sound, make her th' only spot to be considered. She's God's own choice and the people's, too, fo' a naval base."

"But unfortunately congress also has something to say about choosin' it," spoke Haines.

"To be shuah they do," said Gulf City's mayor, "but—"

"And there was a man here from Altaicola yesterday," again interrupted the secretary, "who said that Gulf City was fit only to be the state refuge fo' aged and indigent frogs."

"Say, they ain't a man in Altaicola wot can speak th' truth," indignantly shrieked the old colonel, almost losing control of himself, "because their heads is always a-buzzin' and a-buzzin' from th' quinine they have to take to keep the fever away, sah."

The mayor sat directly in front of Haines, at the opposite side of his desk. Regaining his composure, he suddenly leaned forward and half whispered to the secretary:

"Mah young friend, don't let Senator

Langdon get switched away from Gulf City by them cheap skates from Altaicola. Now, if you'll get th' senator to vote fo' Gulf City we'll see—"

"I'll see, sah, as an officer of th' Gulf City Land company—that you get taken care of."

Haines eyes opened wide.

"Go on, colonel; go on with your offer," he said.

"Well, I'll see that a block of stock, sah—a big block—is set aside fo' Senator Langdon an' another fo' you too. We've made this arrangement elsewhere. We'll outbid Altaicola every time. They're po' sports an' hate to give up."

"So Altaicola is bidding, too?" excitedly asked Haines.

"Why, of co'se it is. Ah, yo' as blind as that o' ah yo' foolin' with me?" questioned Telfer suspiciously.

"Seems to me yo' ought to know more about that end of it than a fellow clear from th' gulf."

"Certainly, certainly," mumbled Haines impatiently as he endeavored to associate coherently, intelligently, in his mind these startling new revelations of Telfer with certain incidents he had previously noted in the operations of the committee on naval affairs.

Then he looked across at the mayor and smiled. Apparently he had heard nothing to amaze him.

"Colonel," he returned calmly, dropping into a voice that sounded of pity for the gray hairs of the lobbyist.

"about fifty men a day come to me with propositions like that. There is nothing doing, colonel. I couldn't possibly interest Senator Langdon, because he has the faculty of judging for himself, and he would be prejudiced against either town that came out with such a proposition."

"Lan' speculation is legitimate," protested the colonel cunningly.

Haines agreed.

"Certainly—by outsiders. But it's d—d thiev'ry when engaged in by any one connected with putting a bill through. If I were to tell Senator Langdon what you have told me it would decide him unalterably in favor of Altaicola. Senator Langdon, sir, is one of the few men in Washington who would rather be thought a fool than a grafter if it came down to that."

The mayor of Gulf City jumped to his feet, his face blazing in rage, not in shame.

"Seems to me yo're mighty fresh young man," he blustered. "What kind of politics is Langdon playin'?"

"Not fresh, colonel; only friendly. I'm just tipping you off how not to be a friend to Altaicola. As to his politics, the senator will answer you himself."

A scornful laugh accompanied Telfer's reply.

"Altaicola, huh! I reckon yo' must be a fool, after all. Why, everybody knows of the speculation in land around Altaicola, and everybody knows it ain't outsiders that's doin' it. It's the insiders, right here in Washington. If yo' ain't in, yo' can easy get a lachekey. Young man, yo'll find out things some day, and yo'll drop to it all."

"I guess I was too late with yo'. That's about the size of it. I guess Altaicola 'll talk to yo'," went on the mayor. "If that feller Fairbrother of Altaicola had been able to hold his tongue maybe I wouldn't know so much. But now I know what's what. I know this—that yo're either a big fool or an insider. Yo're a nice young feller. I have kind-a taken a fancy to yo'. I like to see yo' young feller get along and not miss yo' chances. Come, my boy, get wise to yo'self, get wise to yo'self! Climb on to the band wagon with yo' friends."

But concluded that he might be able to get more definite information out of Telfer if he humored him a bit.

"I tell you, colonel," he finally said, "these are pretty grave charges yo're making, but I'll tell you confidentially, owing to your liking for me, that it is not yet too late to do something for Gulf City. Now, just suppose you and I dine together tonight early, and we'll go over the whole ground to see how things lie. Will you?"

The colonel held out his hand, smiling broadly. He felt that at last he had won the secretary over; that the young man was at heart anxious to take money for his influence with the senator.

"All right, my boy, yo're on. We'll dine together. Yo' are absolutely certain that it won't be too late to get to Senator Langdon?"

NEW TARIFFNEARLY FINISHEDWays and Means Committee
Present Bill March 15.Amount of Damage Done By Storm
Around Baltimore Will Be About
$1,000,000.CHANGE DATE OF INAUGURAL

Washington, March 6.—The new tariff has been tentatively completed by the Republican members of the house ways and means committee and the tariff framers are now devoting their attention principally to discussing the proposed provisions for additional means for securing revenue.

Among those suggested are an inheritance tax, recommended by both President Taft and former President Roosevelt; an income tax and various additions to the internal revenue tax. The members declare the bill will be ready to introduce on March 15.

One Million Dollars Loss.

Baltimore, March 6.—Estimates to day placed the damage by the storm to public service corporations at about $1,000,000.

Harry Granger, brother-in-law of George R. Gaither, who at the last election was Republican candidate for governor, was found dead today, a victim of the storm. The body was frozen stiff.

Cadets' Valiant Service.

New York, March 6.—The corps of cadets of the United States Military academy, which took part in the Taft inauguration ceremonies, returned to West Point late Friday. They had a chance to perform real war duty on the trip to Washington in clearing the tracks of fallen telegraph poles between Baltimore and Washington.

When two special trains bearing the cadets arrived in Baltimore early Thursday morning the railroad officials reported that conditions were such that they believed the cadets could not get through in time for the inaugural parade.

At the suggestion of their commander, the cadets' train was given the right of way, and the soldiers not only cleared a path for themselves, but the path they cleared enabled hundreds of others to reach the capital in time for the parade.

Cannon Favors Change of Date.

Washington, March 6.—Speaker Cannon has declared in favor of changing the date of the presidential inauguration from March 4 to May 1, and added that as one of the representatives in congress he would lend his aid in any effort to bring this about.

"I witnessed the dreadful weather conditions that prevailed in 1872, when 400 or 500 people caught their deaths," he said. "I recall the Harrison inauguration with a soaking, chilling rain storm and the snow and ice gale that made life miserable at Cleveland's second inauguration."

"If a change of date is made, it might as well be fixed later than April, for even April rains would cause great discomfort and much sickness, and I should think that May 1 would provide more certainty of fair weather."

the maternal spirit so deplorably lacking in their American sisters. In Chile a woman without children is pitted, while in New York she is congratulated.

Secret domestic success in Chile is due, says the lecturer, to the fact that women don't ask questions. If the old man doesn't roll in until 4 a. m. his wife keeps "mum." If anything, she appears a little sweeter at the breakfast table if the late arrival gets up in time for that meal. It's none of her business, anyway, says the senator.

"The chances are that he just got in with a few friends, had some drinks, and possibly would have been unable to come home at the proper time, even if the inclination was there. The wife knows that, so why ask. There are no divorces in Chile and that's one of the best reasons women there manage their husbands so that they do not know they are managed," is the way the senator puts it.

"The Latin women understand men," said the lecturer, "and the Anglo-Saxon women do not. The husband appreciates this, and the wife may have anything she wishes, from a diamond ring to an Easter hat. I know you will say that an old maid knows little about managing a husband, and children, but if I should be married tomorrow I would manage a husband as our women do—so that they do not know that they are being managed. Woman must have little duplicity, a little diplomacy, and a little bit of deceit to man-

STORMY DAYS AT OTHER INAUGURALS

Only Three Presidents Escape
Taf's Experience.

Earliest Records of U. S. Signal Service Show Blizzard for Festal Day.

START WITH GRANT IN 1873.

Washington, March 6.—One presidential inauguration is much like another, save as the changing weather casts a new tint over the picture. The meteorological reception accorded President Taft, however, is but a duplication of the inaugural day program for Washington furnished by the weather man, in many instances, since the induction of President Grant March 4, 1873. The weather that day was bitterly cold.

Since that time the only presidents who escaped the wrath of the elements on their inauguration day have been Hayes in 1877, Cleveland at his first inauguration in 1885 and Roosevelt in 1905.

Finds One Noted Victim.

Three-quarters of the inauguration days have been stormy and hundreds of deaths have resulted from persons being exposed to the cold and damp weather which generally prevailed during the month of March. Among those who are believed to have sacrificed their lives in this way was President Harrison, who never recovered from a cold he contracted on inauguration day.

Time and again the lawmakers have endeavored to have the date of the ceremony changed to a day in April or May, but so far nothing has resulted. As a consequence of yesterday's storm it is expected that the agitation will be renewed, and another effort made to have congress set the presidential inaugural date in some month other than March.

Never in the meteorological history of Washington was there a more disagreeable day than March 4, 1865, when the streets were full of mud. Men who had traveled miles to see Abraham Lincoln inaugurated were forced to wade through mire ankle deep. Cloudy weather prevailed when Grant became president in 1869 but four years later, March 4, 1873, there was a storm almost the equal of that which descended on the capital yesterday.

Men Blown From Feet.
The wind blew with hurricane fury and the marchers were drenched by rain, hail and snow. Many of the national guardsmen and federal troops were blown off their feet by the wind, and it was a sorry-looking line that passed the reviewing stand.

The inauguration of President Hayes was in marked contrast in point of weather. A few clouds appeared in the morning but before the ceremonies they had disappeared.

When Garfield became president, March 4, 1881, the streets again were filled with mud and slush, and throughout the day there was a steady drizzle of sleet and rain. The storm became so severe that while the parade was in progress several military organizations refused to march. Late in the day the weather moderated, however, and the inaugural ball was attended by many.

Blue skies marked the inauguration of President Cleveland in 1885, but four years later, when Benjamin Harrison was inducted into office, the day was bitterly cold and throughout the ceremonies the rain came down in torrents. While President Harrison was taking the oath of office he was sheltered under President Cleveland's umbrella.

Rain, Sleet and Snow.

Four years later, when President Cleveland took the oath of office for the second time, there was another day of rain, sleet and slush. From morning until night it drizzled, and the streets were filled to the curb with water. The ball, consequently, was a dismal failure.

President McKinley's first inaugural day in 1897 was not so bad, but his second term began with a down-pour of rain, which changed to snow and sleet. The outdoor exercises were marred by the weather, which kept many of the visitors away from the inaugural ball.

President Roosevelt in 1905 triumphed over the "inaugural day weather." In the morning clouds rolled up and the wind blew fiercely, but when the actual time for the inaugural ceremonies arrived the wind abated, the weather became warm and the vast crowd about the capitol and along Pennsylvania avenue reflected the change in the weather, which added to their enthusiasm and good nature.

Work to Change Date.

Congressman Jenkins, of Wisconsin, working in conjunction with Senator Clark, has inaugurated an active campaign in behalf of those who wish the date of the presidential inauguration changed to a more favorable month. They have introduced in the house a resolution to have the constitution amended, and a committee of citizens representing each state in the Union has been appointed to urge the passage of the bill. The resolution, however, still is pending, and the committee still is urging its adoption.

The faint-hearted are those who think only of feeding themselves.

Prof. F. J. Miller, associate professor of Latin of the University of Chicago, inspected the public schools yesterday with a view of admitting the graduates of the school into the university without an examination. Prof. Miller was en route home from attending the classical conference at New Orleans, and returned to Chicago last night at 6:15 o'clock. He spent the entire day in class rooms, and personally was pleased with the work. The visit will be reported to the director, and probably the graduates will be admitted.

Poet's Grandson a Beggar.

At Shap, Westmoreland, yesterday, Charles Southey, son of the late vicar of Ashham and grandson of the poet Robert Southey, was sent to jail for a week for begging at Patterdale Hall on Sunday night.

He told the bench a pathetic story. His father, he said, gave him a good education, but no trade, so he took up literature. He got married and had a comfortable home, but his wife left him years ago and he had to sell his home. Afterwards he stole half a sovereign, for which he was sent to prison. He had since been unable to pursue literary work, his appearance being against him.

"I have not known what it is to have a proper meal for a long time."

added the prisoner, "but have had to subsist at the best of time on fish and chips in common lodging houses."—London Mail.
